-II- COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines the theoretical foundations of bilingualism through focus on linguistic, anthropological, sociological, psychological, and educational research on culturally, linguistically, and cognitively diverse students. Major theoretical approaches are introduced to SLA for doctoral students interested in conducting research in the areas of English to Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) and Foreign Language education (FL). The course will aim to identify some of the major issues in the field, the methods used to research them, and the main findings and theories developed to explain how languages are learned and acquired. Topics included are: literacy and bilingualism, social justice, immigrant learners, critical pedagogy, long-term ELLs, and brain-based teaching and learning.

A. Prerequisites – admission to the CEHD Ph.D. program or permission of instructor.
B. Catalogue description - Examines theoretical foundations of bilingual and ESL education through focus on linguistics, anthropology, sociology, psychology, and education research addressing language minority students.

-III- LEARNER OUTCOMES:

This course is designed to enable students to:

1. Examine theoretical foundations of bilingualism through teaching and learning research, practices, and realities as they relate to diverse learners.
2. Investigate relevant findings in linguistic, anthropological, sociological, psychological, and socio-cultural research and their implications for education classroom research, policy, and practice.

3. Articulate a personal definition of the emergent nature of bilingualism and biculturalism on teaching and learning in multicultural settings.

4. Examine their immediate local educational context in light of demographic pattern shifts in teaching and learning in multicultural settings as it pertains to diversity practices and policies in teacher education.

5. Explore bilingualism and biculturality and their impact on today’s multilingual/multicultural classrooms.

6. Situate current pedagogy and its efficacy on reaching all culturally, cognitively, and linguistically diverse learners.

7. Consider the implications of bilingualism/biculturalism, multiculturalism, multilingualism, and their impact in teaching and learning.

8. Situate one’s research within the field through a survey of second language/bilingual research/theoretical perspectives.

9. Design research instruments and gather classroom or field data with consideration to the social, cultural and institutional contexts of the research project and classroom.

10. Analyze and interpret data from multiple sources and draw interpretive conclusions that may suggest future research/educational policy and/or implications for L2 pedagogy.

NATURE OF COURSE DELIVERY:

This course will be taught as a doctoral seminar, with student involvement and presentations constituting a major portion of the coursework. Each student is expected to fully participate in class discussions. Students are expected to have read all assignments before meeting each week and to actively participate in the discussions on the assigned readings. Each student will be assigned a week in which they will be responsible for leading the discussion. Discussion leaders are expected to present thorough and critical perspectives while engaging colleagues in an interactive activity. Instruction includes:

- Student Presentations (student directed presentations and discussions);
- Discussions (active involvement of students in learning by asking questions that engage doctoral students in deep critical thinking and engaged verbal interaction);
- Cooperative and Collaborative learning (small group guided learning interactions emphasizing learning from and with others);
- Guest lectures;
- School/education-based research

GUIDELINES & PERFORMANCE-BASED RUBRICS

Lead Interactive Discussion on Readings

All articles must be clearly identified in APA (6th edition) style.

1. Each student will sign up to lead the in-class discussion on one set of readings listed in the course syllabus. You must further research the topic and locate no fewer than 2 research articles, book chapters, or monographs, etc. on the topic. These must be distributed to the class and professor no later than one week prior to your presentation. This may be done in hard copy, electronic link, or placed on e-reserve through the GMU libraries. For your presentation you are encouraged to use visual aids, such PowerPoint, video, slides, or photos. Be sure to prepare a handout as a reference or guide. Make one copy for each member of the class and professor. You will lead the discussion by preparing an interactive activity to illustrate some of the concepts. You must include the purpose of the study and the nature of the research questions or hypotheses. Outline the method used so as to determine if the study was qualitative or quantitative in design. Also, as applicable, attend to how each variable was measured. Finally, describe the results of the study and conclusions drawn by the researcher(s).

2. It is expected that students will have read the articles and grappled with the concepts before each presentation. Your handout may include additional resources (“must reads”) or a summary of the most salient features.

Final Project – Critical Analysis Review

Students are to write a 1-2 page rationale on the selection of your topic. Reflect on why this topic is relevant and in what way it will support the existing corpus of literature and/or your own current educational circumstance. Due: March 20th

The final project will be a synthesis on a chosen topic that may be considered a precursor to your dissertation research or review of literature. You should review and critique no fewer than four studies that highlight this area of the field. You should also include your ideas about the future directions of research on the topic.

Annotated Bibliography: Submit a list of the articles you’ve found in journals or book chapters on the chosen topic with a one-paragraph justification of why you chose the articles. Due: April 17th

Your final project may take the form of:
1. An article being prepared for publication
2. An action research study
3. The beginning of a literature review for the dissertation
4. A presentation prepared for a state, regional, or national conference
5. A critical analysis of a particular topic with a dialogic perspective
6. Other options

REATIONS TO READINGS FOR EDUC 882

In preparing the readings for each week, you should attend to the following guidelines. These must be word processed (no required page length) and sometimes handed in. Making notes will greatly contribute to your level of knowledge in class discussions.

As you read the required articles and those recommended by your colleagues consider the following:

- What are the implications for bilingualism/biculturalism, multiculturalism, multilingualism and their impact in teaching and learning?
- How can you situate your own research interest(s)?
- In what way(s) does this research suggest future policy and/or implications for L2 pedagogy?

Additional questions you may wish to consider:

How do you connect with this article?
What theories are involved?
What constitutes the concepts?
What paradigm does this come from?
What are the assumptions working in this paradigm?
How is new knowledge constructed here?
What theoretical framework does this come from?
